- Inclusion of child care concerns in long-term land-use planning and transportation policies; and
- Livable wages for the industry's workforce.

This surge in jobs and population will not only create the need for new investments in the industry, it will also place added stress on an already overburdened industry.

	Furthermore, to be fully successful in meeting these needs, California and the country as a whole need a radical shift in our public consciousness, one that begins to view the abild

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

This Guide is designed to introduce local child care leaders, in the community or in government, to creative solutions for addressing barriers to child care facilities and business development. It is written from the perspective of, and uses models from, projects that have been implemented at the county and city level, but could be utilized on a smaller or larger geographical scale.

This Guide introduces child care advocates to six major strategic impact areas that can have the greatest effect on economic development planning:

Changing perceptions of child care: This impact area will provide the underpinning for most of your work. It involves researching, then spreading the word about the the various players you will want to recruit to work

Changing Perceptions About Child Care

changing perceptions about the child care field. It is through repetition of simple concepts that a message is transformed from abstract to concrete. A traditional weakness of advocacy in social services is fragmented communication. When government or business leaders hear about a problem in their communities – but also hear conflicting information on how to address it – they will turn away from the issue more often than go to the trouble of figuring out the best and fairest solutions. Conversely, if they hear consistent information over a period of time about why and how to address a problem, along with the concrete benefits to

This chapter will provide guidance on how to get your message out, through the following three strategies:

- 1. Develop materials;
- 2. Participate in meetings and planning, and present information on child care in diverse forums; and
- 3. Host events/summits to raise awareness publicity around particular issues.

Within each strategy area, your target audiences will be discussed along with any important information about how to tailor your message to that audience.

STRATEGY #1: DEVELOP MATERIALS

	understand the essence of your project without overwhelming them. A brochure and issue sheets will probably be adequate if you are trying to create a general interest in your project.
	If you are highlighting a current issue or event he sure to provide healteness in your project.

- What process is used to allocate the money?
- Is child care listed among the funding priorities?
- How are CDBG funds currently being used?
- How have CDBG funds been used in the past?
- Are Section 108 loan guarantees being used and, if so, for what activities?
- How is the office meeting its public participation requirements?

	3. What major projects, if any, are going on in the zone?
	4. What types of businesses are being assisted?
	5. How has child care been taken into account within the zone?

In addition, property on military bases will be allocated to various entities. With advocacy, some building space could be dedicated to child care.
