5. Page 19, line 22: before "The defendant" add "The defendant, Jamie Hayes, is charged with murder in violation of Penal Code section 187.
To prove that the defendant is guilty of this crime, the Prosecution must prove that:
(1) Hayes committed an act that caused the death of another person, Lee Valdez; AND
(2) When Hayes acted, Hayes had a state of mind called malice aforethought; AND
(3) Hayes killed without lawful justification.
There are two kinds of malice aforethought, express malice and implied malice. Proof of either is sufficient to establish the state of mind required for murder.
Hayes acted with express malice if Hayes unlawfully intended to kill."

6. Page 19, line 30: add "Malice aforethought does not require hatred or ill will toward the victim. It is a mental state that must be formed before the act that causes death is committed. It does not require deliberation or the passage of any particular period of time."

In this case, the police falsely told the defendant that his prints were found on the neck of the victim, and then the defendant confessed to the murder. The court found the statement made by the police was not a "prejudicial deception" of the defendant, and therefore did not induce the defendant's confession under the circumstances. Additionally, the court rejected the defendant's assertion that asking to speak to his wife indicated his intention to assert his Miranda rights."
